Gospel Temperance Meetings.
Two very successful Gospel temperance meetings were held yesterday by the local evangelists, Messrs. Watkins and McKain. In the morning at 10 o'clock the huts of the colored laborers at the tunnel mouths were visited and a good meeting was held, the laborers leaving their gambling games to listen to the speakers. The afternoon meeting at the upper market place was largely attended, and it is evident from the increasing attendance that the efforts put forth are heartily appreciated. SCIENTIFICALLY DONE UP.

Last evening on the Eim Grove train which left the city at 4 o'clock were two intoxicated Pittsburgh excursionists. They insisted on misbehaving all the intoxicated Pittsburgh excursionists. They insisted on misbehaving all the way out, much to the annoyance of a number of lady passengers. The conductor spoke to them repeatedly, without effect. It was raining hard when the Park was reached, and the men persisted in standing on the seats. They went on to Eim Grove, and came back to the Park, where the conductors are sisted in standing on the seats. They went on to Elm Grove, and came back to the Park, where the conductor put them off. They resisted, and he had to exert a good deal of force, but he got there just the same. They attempted to climb back on the car, and assaulted the conductor. He got off, and though either man was larger than he, whipped both of them soundly.

There has been a good deal of such trouble on the road, and to the credit of Wheeling people be it said, the offenders are nearly all Pittsburgh visitors. The company has adopted a new rule, which was piomulgated yesterday:

"Any person or persons using vile language on the care of the Wheeling & Elm Grove railroad will be promptly put off and reported to the Park authorities for non-admittance. The use of abusive language and disorderly behavior in the Park is strictly prohibited, and anyone not complying with this rule will be promptly ejected. Persons tearing off flowers, damaging trees or trespassing in general, will be arrected and fined to the full extent of the law. But all respectable persons will always be protected by those in anthority." all respectable persons will always protected by those in authority." It is proposed also to have an offic on each train while in the city limit and offenders will be arrested.

Two Troublesome Prinoners.

Officer West arrested two drunken men on Fourteenth street last evening. One of them fell and skinned his nose. When they reached the City Building one man hid behind a door, and while west was pulling him out the other one ran. He fell with tremendous force on or Chapline street, and was easily recaptured and locked up. One of them gave his name as Flanagan and the other as McGinnis, and both are Pittsburghers who came down on yesterday's excursion. One of them had two immenses are considered in the pairs of shearn in his pockets.

Tremendous Rains Saturday and Yesterday—Some Serious Results to Railroads, Crops and Bridges.

Saturday about 5 o'clock a. m. one of the extraordinarily heavy rains to which the people of this section have become accustomed, began, and it continued at intervals with more or less force most of the forenoon. The streets were quickly flooded with the yellow tide, and the usual mass of sand, dirt and stones were deposited at all cross streets. Sewere deposited at all cross streets. All travel was stopped for two hours or more. The Island cars were also caught by the blockade, but after several had stopped one driver ran his car off the track, around on the street and back on the track. The others followed suit, and the electric cars were then allowed to run down the track below Fourteenth street. were deposited at all cross streets. Sew-ers were choked up and lakes formed at many places, and several cellars were in-vaded by the muddy waters. Caldwell's run was a terrific torrent for a time, showing that the storm was even heavier east of the city than here. Its current struck the bank at the sharp angle is the channel at Eoff and Twenty-fourth streets, with great violence at one time streets, with great violence, at one time imperilling the trestle of the railroad atractors and threatening to cut int

At the bridge over Chapline street, the water undermined the street seriously, causing a lot of the street seriously, causing a lot of the street spaying and the sidewalk to drop into the run bed. It looked as if the bridge would go out, but the stream fell before the bridge was materially damaged.

Bogg's run sent out a big volume of water, bringing down a great deal of drift and rubbish, and flooding the low ground between the bills and the river.

South of Boggs run the damage was still greater. The B. & O. came in for a large share of the loss. Between the bridge and the Junction there were two bad washouts on the main line, the embankment and road-bed being scooped out to a depth of fifteen feet, leaving the rails and ties swinging in the air. Below the Junction in the long cut the road-bed was covered with mud, gravel and water, and was impassable. The Ohio liver road had a washout just south of Benwood Junction, and of the train due here at 11 o'clock in the worning was caught below it, and did not get up to the city until late in the afternoon, after the break had been repaired. The B. & O. then used the Ohio River track to Moundsville.
